

October 19, 2005

SECTION: Business; Transport; Airlines; Pg. 61

LENGTH: 146 words

HEADLINE: Pilots aiming for different high challenge

BODY:

A Campaign by two EasyJet pilots at East Midlands Airport to raise £19,344 has almost reached its goal. Steve Moody and Andy Brown set themselves the challenge on behalf of the National Society for Epilepsy. The money equates to £1 per foot that the pair will climb on a quest to conquer Mount Kilimanjaro, Africa's highest mountain, in December.

Two directors of truck dealer Keltruck, which has a showroom at the Centrum Business Park, Burton, heard about the appeal and offered £1,000 to the fund.

After extensive planning that included insuring one of their lorries for £10m so that it could be photographed close to an EasyJet plane, Keltruck director Andrew Bentley presented the biggest single donation of the campaign.

Pictured, from left, are Steve Moody, Andrew Bentley, Andy Brown and Kim Barlow-Miles, of the National Society for Epilepsy.

LOAD-DATE: October 20, 2005